The Story of Teco

MUCH of the best of happiness comes directly from the perception of the beautiful; and all of the beautiful, so far as sight is concerned, arises from either form or color, and in its highest attainment from a combination of both. There is wondrous wealth of beauty in a curved line; indeed, all the beauty of form and shape is embodied in it, and nowhere else is there such opportunity for using this beauty of the curved line as in the potters art. This has been its chief field of use since earliest time. Its opportunity for the use of color is equally excellent and unsurpassed by any other art. So the potter has the opportunity to combine those two most important producers of happiness, form and color, and when he uses them with enthusiasm and individuality he has indeed fulfilled a mission and has created. He has made something that makes him happier, in the making of it, and that will go out carrying joy and enthusiasm to all who use it or see it.

The vase which you place in your home to beautify and adorn it, should have individuality, and embody the longings and aspirations of some one man who has crystallized his love of the beautiful into tangible form, and has woven into it, in some mysterious manner, the song of the bird, the fragrance of the flower, the laughter of the sunshine and the brilliant colorings of the sky.

Teco Art Pottery might very appropriately be called the art ideal of Mr. William D. Gates, its creator. Desiring to produce an art ware that would harmonize with all its surroundings, which, while adding to the beauty of the flower or leaf placed in the vase, at the same time enhanced the beauty of the vase itself, he has devoted a lifetime to experimenting with different combinations to produce his ideal art pottery. The name Teco is derived from "Te" in Terra and "Co" in Cotta, and is pronounced as though spelled Tea-Ko.

Teco Art Pottery is the story of men of enthusiasm, who wrought with love and who believed fully in their work, and while many of the designs are purely classical, hints have also been taken from flowers and aquatic plants.

Acting on the assumption that beautiful surroundings help to produce beautiful designs, the Gates Potteries are located in a picturesque valley beside a charming little lake. Flowers, particularly aquatic plants, are cultivated in profusion as an incentive to the artist-designers to take motif from these beautiful gifts of nature.

Teco Art Pottery possesses an individuality of its own which marks a new era in decorative arts. Its chasteness of design and harmony of decoration, its new and unique glaze, its velvety, glossless finish and soft, moss green color, celebrated for its delicate shadings and the richness of its tone, appeals forcefully to the lover of the beautiful and have won for Teco Art Pottery an enviable reputation from connoisseurs and collectors at home and abroad.

The Sterling Mark

We prize most highly a piece of silver with the "Sterling" mark on it, because the mark tells us the quality of the silver. Makers of objects of art have long used a "hall-mark" as a pledge of quality. To protect the purchaser against substitution, the Gates Potteries stamp this mark on every piece of Teco Art Pottery, and none is genuine without it.

Insist that the pieces you purchase have the Teco mark on them, as it is your guarantee of quality and genuineness. When you see the Teco mark on any piece of pottery you can rely upon its artistic merit and intrinsic worth.

When you select a piece of Teco Art Pottery for a gift, you know it will be acceptable and prized by the recipient, because the mark Teco is a guarantee of genuine art value, and will be so recognized wherever it is seen.

There is no monotony in Teco Art Pottery. The artist-potters are ever moulding into artistic form new ideals of design and beauty. Thus while one piece of Teco Pottery may show a strictly classical design, such as might have been formed by the potter of Pompeii or Rome, another will show the lovely form of the iris, the water lily or the lotus, and still others the ideals of the artist-potter crystallized into perfect forms of grace and beauty.

The parlor, reception hall, den, library and the club are each made more attractive and inviting by an appropriate piece of Teco, and those who really love art for art's sake, will find keen enjoyment and constant satisfaction in its possession. You will find Teco Art Pottery an exquisite addition to the furnishings of your home. You will enjoy it more the longer you have it. Its beauty is lasting, its usefulness increases with familiarity, its value will grow with age.

As a gift for weddings, birthdays, anniversaries, Christmas, etc., Teco Art Pottery offers a wide range for selection, from pieces of small cost to those of considerable intrinsic value, while there is but little likelihood of duplication, and it will be

When sending us an order, kindly see that your name and full address is plainly written, and where you desire shipment to be made by any particular express company, please so state. Should you desire us to send the package to some one other than yourself, be careful to give explicit instructions and shipping directions, including name, address, and date on which you desire the package to arrive at its destination. If you have but little time in which to send a gift, you can order direct from us, enclosing directions and the card or message you wish enclosed, and we will personally select and forward to destination the piece desired, securely packed and charges prepaid.

Design No. 362. Among the many pleasing Teco shapes this design by E. D. Gates possesses distinct advantages both for decorative purposes and for its usefulness. It will display a small bouquet of flowers very pleasingly as the oval shape of the flowers will conform in outline to the oval of the base. Size four inches high by three inches wide.
